Massachusetts High Technology Council Statement On General Electric Headquarters Decision

Waltham, Mass. – The Massachusetts High Tech Council welcomes the news that General Electric will locate its world headquarters in Boston and looks forward to engaging with GE’s senior leadership as they expand and elevate their presence in Massachusetts.

“GE’s selection of Boston reinforces the limitless opportunities for economic growth that are available to us when business and political leaders work together to reinforce our Commonwealth’s strengths and to address our competitive challenges,” said Council President Chris Anderson. “Governor Baker and Mayor Walsh should be commended for their creativity and diligence in bringing GE’s headquarters here and we congratulate them on this significant milestone in Massachusetts’s economic history.”

“We know GE will be an immediate “impact player” on the state’s policy, civic, educational and philanthropic landscape and we are enthusiastic about engaging GE leaders in our collective mission to enhance the state’s technology community,” said Anderson.
