

MASSACHUSETTS HIGHTECHNOLOGYCOUNCIL

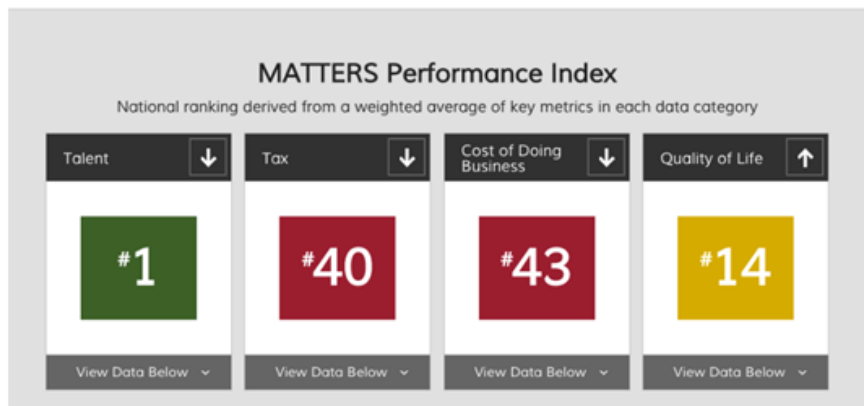

Dedicated to Growth... Committed to Action

MATTERS 2.0 Launched; New Feature Includes Results from Inaugural MATTERS Executive Survey

On October 20, the Council unveiled a redesigned version of the Massachusetts Technology Talent and Economic Reporting System \(MATTERS\) which includes an assessment of the Commonwealth's strengths and risks collected by a survey of job-creators. MATTERS is a uniquely comprehensive and dynamic aggregation of more than 50 key quantitative metrics and allows technology leaders and policymakers to evaluate and compare the business climate in Massachusetts and competitor states. MATTERS 2.0 includes more than 20 new metrics and a redesigned State Profile featuring new performance indices focused on talent, tax, cost of doing business and quality of life.

As part of the launch of MATTERS 2.0, the Council also released the results of our inaugural MATTERS Executive Competitiveness Survey. Survey responses from more than 60 CEOs and senior executives committed to building thriving technology companies described the Commonwealth as a competitive place to operate with business conditions that are stable or improving. Responses also revealed, however, deep and broad concerns about business costs and other challenges that threaten prospects for growth.

"We look forward to analyzing the MATTERS 2.0 data with our colleagues in industry and academia and using the information to make the Commonwealth an even more attractive place for technology companies"

~ Governor Charlie Baker

Council and Coalition Partners Focus on Constitutional Amendment to Hike Income Tax Rate

In a recent communication from Council Chairman Bill Achtmeyer to members, Bill described the Council's strategy concerning the proposed Constitutional Amendment that would impose an 80% increase in the personal income tax rate for certain high-income Massachusetts taxpayers. The Council is working to develop and help lead a coalition of job creators, nonprofit leaders and other impacted stakeholders to work with us as we implement this strategy.

As recently reported by the Boston Globe and State House News Service, the Council's current efforts are focused on developing additional information on the impacts and effects of the proposal. The Council is committed to ensuring that legislators fully understand the potential ramifications of the proposal well in advance of their next joint meeting in Constitutional Convention (during the 2017- 2018 Legislative Session) at which time they will determine whether or not to put the question on the 2018 state election ballot.

2016 Ballot Questions Enter Final Stretch

With Election Day less than two weeks away and early voting already underway, it is crunch time for candidates and for several ballot questions voters will consider this year.

As a reminder, the Council is urging our members and Massachusetts citizens to vote "yes" on Question 2, which would allow state education officials to expand access to public charter schools, particularly in low-performing school districts. The Council has been a longtime advocate for public charter schools and has consistently led efforts to rally business and technology leaders to support their expansion. As outlined in Council President Chris Anderson's August 5 op-ed in the Boston Business Journal, expanding access to charter schools is not just a moral and social issue, but also one with critical economic ramifications for the Commonwealth and its citizens.

The YesOn2MA coalition has consistently attracted a broad and bipartisan group of supporters. In recent weeks an array of Democratic state leaders including House Speaker DeLeo, House Speaker Pro Tem Pat Haddad (a former public school teacher and municipal school committee member) and the House Chairwoman of the legislature's Education Committee Alice Peisch have joined Republican Governor Baker to urge voters to lift the cap on charter schools. In thoughtful op-eds, inspiring remarks, and a compelling ad featuring Governor Baker, state leaders have articulated an undeniable case to put students and parents above politics.

The Council has also joined a broad coalition of business, political and public safety leaders to oppose Question 4 which would fully legalize the sale and use of marijuana in Massachusetts. Massachusetts currently permits the medical use of marijuana by prescription and has already decriminalized the possession of small amounts of the drug. The Council believes that full legalization and creation of a large-scale marijuana industry in Massachusetts would be unwise. Proponents of legalization are well-organized and well-resourced with significant funding from out-of-state marijuana industry players. Council members who wish to support the opposition effort personally can contact the Campaign for a Safe and Healthy Massachusetts or Mark Gallagher for more information.
